

A Dope Document

Mostly about cats...

This document is just to test that the text to speech alternative format is working properly. This following paragraph will be divided into columns; however, it should be read column by column without jumping around from one column to the other. With that said, if this message was read out loud in a coherent manner, then the text to speech is working as required.

This text is also divided into columns, however, now there is a line between the columns in order to see what the text to speech does. Again, if this section of the document was read out loud in a coherent manner, then the text to speech alternative format is working as required.

This paragraph is also divided into 3 columns, with the caveat that this text has images inserted in it. The image however should not prevent the text from being read out loud in a coherent manner. If that is the case, then the text to speech feature is working as required.

This paragraph is divided into 2 columns, with the majority of the text found on the right-side column; as such, the text should be read column by column without jumping around from one column to the next. With that said, if this message was read out loud in a coherent manner, then the text to speech is working as required.

This following paragraph is also divided into 2 columns, with the majority of the text found on the left-sided column; as such, the text should
